

WE NOMINATE

Richard Allen Lester, distinguished young economist and chairman of Princeton University's Department of Economies and Social Institutions, who this past week-as the Western World prepared to translate plans and fears into armed actuality-was largely responsible for the publication of a carefully formulated statement in which 220 economists endorsed measures that should serve as a "principal line of defense" against inflation. The statement, prepared here last month and then distributed throughout the country for signature, was issued 24 hours before the national emergency was declared, and well in advance of the recently announced "rollbacks."

In an era when many are mystified by some of the proposals outlined by persons in high places. the action of Lester and his associates came as refreshing re-assurance of the role education and research can play in the functioning of democracy. They set forth unvarnished fundamentals, insisted that "an ever-spreading system of direct controls could jeopardize our system of free enterprise and collective bargaining," and concluded, "if adequate fiscal and credit measures are not employed, the country will face the ominous choice between continuous inflation and a prolonged application of widespread government price and wage controls." Lester, a 42-year old native of tiny Blaisdell. N. Y., who entered academie life here some two decades ago, is representative of a new generation of scholar-teachers dedicated to the Wilsonian ideal of "education in the Nation's service." Widely known in the field of labor economics, Lester, in addition to serving as a departmental head and professor of economics, holds forth as Research Associate in Princeton's unique Industrial Relations Section. the organization established in 1922 through funds provided by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

An alumnus of Yale, Lester obtained his advanced degrees at Princeton and appointments to the Princeton Faculty were followed by assignments at the University of Washington and Duke University. During World War II, at the end of which he returned here, Lester completed the equivalent of a full career as consultant to government agencies. His wartime posts included the chairmanship of the Southern Textile Commission of the War Labor Board and assignments with five other top-drawer groups of Washington policy-makers.

For helping develop mutually beneficial relationships between government, industry, labor and higher education; for providing the kind of leadership that privately sustained education must provide if it is to survive; for substituting toughminded thinking for economic panaceas and shortcuts: he is TOWN TOPICS' nominee for

What Kind of Christmas? The ealendar was proof that Monday would be December 25, and more than 19 centuries in the history of mankind testilied to the fact that December 25 was Christmas Day. A day of rejoicing, of quiet happiness, of peace on earth and good will toward men,

But this year, there was doubt in the mind of man. Peace no longer reigned, and one nation, balked at every turn in its cease, less efforts to restore it in honorable fashion, could not but begin to develop a slow hatred of another nation, which was openly dealing in treachery and lies as the foundation for its program of world conquest.

If peace had vanished into the frozen wastes of Korea, and had taken good will with it, what was left of rejoicing and quiet happiness? For the past three weeks, it had been wholly apparent to those strong enough to read the face of the future that, even without a global war, mounting sacrifices and possibly hardship lay ahead.

It was apparent that in Washington, the administration was procrastinating—partially through the necessity for time in its all-out production effort, partially because it shrank from dealing out the worst news at Christmas-time. But forecasts were rife that scarcity, inflation, heavy taxes and rationing lay ahead—even if unsure peace returned to the earth.

Still and all, the calendar did indicate that December 25 was at hand, and there was no denying it was Christmas. On the surface, store windows were gaily decorated, shops were more crowded than ever, the opportunity for generous giving was unsurpassed. Christmas reds and greens were heart-warming, Christmas lights in and outside homes shone forth brightly.

But it was inside, where it counted most, that you could be sure it was Christmas. If it was a time for concern and for realization of the hard road that lay ahead, it was also a time for renewed faith and for helief in the future. And the fact that it might, for some time to come, be the last Christmas to bring with it all that is best about this time of year would make every moment count that much more.

Quick Answer. Forty-eight hours after the Town Topics Christmas appeal had reached the Princeton community, the minimum amount sought for the grandmother and granddaughter described last week had been received. As had been hoped, funds kept coming and at press time, $727.11 was at hand, the contribution of 142 men, wo men and children.

Gifts ranged from less than $1 to $100, the latter the largest single donation received since the first appeal was made four years ago. In addition to money, clothing and a radio were contributed, as well as the offer of a permanent home in the event that threatened eviction of Mrs. S. and Dolly occurs.

The full story of the community's generosity will not be known until next week, but already it is clear that Christmas has been brought into this small home as it has never been known hefore, and that the work and worry of the months ahead have been greatly assuaged. For those who wonder

If a gift sent now will be of equal value with these already received, the answer is strongly in the affirmative,

Checks should be made payable to The Town Topics Christmas Fund and mailed to Box 371. Contributions may be left at Hinkson's or the Y.W.C.A

Big Sale Pending. If present plans are not greatly altered, initial operations by the Army Quarter master Corps on the 800 acre Rockefeller Institute tract may start about Pebruary 1. Final arrangements, including completion of the transaction and its approval in Washington, have yet to be mad but planning has reached the stage where Princeton contractors and several large insurance companies are conferring with representatives of the Rockefeller trustees on the subject of housing

The experimental laboratories just East of U.S. Route 1, between Plainsboro and Monmouth June tion, will have an annual budget of $6,000,000 about 75 percent of the yearly expenditures of Prince ton University. The first estimate of the number of employees is 600, but there is a possibility that this may increase to 800 when peak operations are reached.

Of these, only about 50 will be of military status (under the command of a brigadier general), with the rest civilians, most of them—Continued on Page 3

Already, a survey is being made of the impact of an increase in the Princeton community's population of 1,500 to 2,000 residents. Their arrivni would, ohviously, he spread out over a period of months, but a careful check must be made on several points, primarily among them public and private school incilities and housing. With no que... tion of priorities for building materials, one aspect of the latter problem will be readily solved. If the sale is consumated, a mejor change in the Princeton community will begin to take place, just as the area expanded in measumble fashion when the R.C.A. Laboratories chose to locate here. If the various complex problems (housing, schooling, increased municipal services, greater buying power, etc) could be solved in wholly satisfactory fashion, the town and particularly its merchants-would not help but benefit from it.

That Man Again, Santa Claus was busier than ever, and so were his chief admirers, Over 3375 for the past week, he had talked to them each afternoon, listening to their requests, answering their questions about his activities and doing much to further the magical belief that is such a cornerstone of a happy childhood.

Enjoying his role hugely and playing it to the hilt, Henry Schultz, 65 years old and totally blind, reported two observations after an afternoon's conversation with those 3 to 6. "The requests they're making are a lot more reasonable than they were last year, and I think mothers who were at their sides when they telephoned are going to have a much easier time giving them what they want.

"Little boys, I must admit, are not quite as polite as the little girls I talk to," he went on, "I haven't had a fresh one in the lot but I get a lot more 'thank you's' from the girls. One youngster was so gracious that I told her to tell her mother that Santa Claus said she had acted just like a princess!"

Handy Men. In all Princeton-or a much wider area, for that matter-you won't find another automobile showroom like that now displaying the 1951 Packard at the Silvester Motor Co., 259 Nassau Street. Proof of the fact is the four months spent by two men, owner John Silvester and his brother-inlaw, Charles Tindall to four-letter athlete at Princeton High School in the 'thirties), in redesigning, remodelling and redecorating several hundred square feet of space.

While Mr. Silvester admits that they spent three whole evenings on sketches for the new showroom and ended up by throwing them away, you'd never know it by looking at the linished product. White pine panelling graces the walls of the Continued on Page 5

News of the Theatres

THE PLAYHOUSE

Never a Dull Moment (Thurs.-Sat.) casts Irene Dunne as a successful Broadway songwriter who marries rancher Fred MacMurray and settles down to solve the problems of a rough and ready life in the cow country. The story has some charm but is often incredibly slow, and, for all her other ability as an actress, Miss Dunne would have done well to bypass the three songs she attempts to put across.

Rio Grande (Sun.-Tues,) will bring those who like a well-made western an extra Christmas present. Directed by the veteran John Ford, here's a colorful, action-filled drama of Indian fighting by the U. S. cavalry in post-Civil War Days. The Texas-Mexican setting provides picturesque photography, while the story of a cavalry officer and his son who wants to follow in his footsteps maintains a good pitch of interest. John Wayne and Maureen O'Hara head an able cast.

American Guerilla in the Philippines (Wed.-Sat.) sentences Tyronne Power to three years in these Pacific islands as his naval torpedo squadron is shot up and he and a few survivors hattle the Japanese until MacArthur returns. Intermittent scenes are good, but the picture runs an hour and three-quarters and often drags noticeably. Micheline Prelle is the romantic interest.

THE GARDEN

The Sundowners (Frl.-Sat.) is a conventional western (in color) that spins a yarn of feuding and fighting over land, money and women. Well-paced for those who favor this sort of entertainment. With Robert Preston, Cathy Downs.

Dumbo and Saludos Amigos (Mon-Tues.), a pair of Walt Disney pictures averaging about 45 minutes apiece, provide The Garden's holiday fare. (It's a sort of "fightfire-with-fire" move, since Disney's artistry will also be on television Christmas afternoon.) "Dumbo" records the adventures of a happy-go-lucky elephant and his friends; "Saludos Amigos" is Disney's excursion into Latin America. Both are enjoyable for all the family.

Woman on the Run (Wed.-Thurs.) is the description given Ann Sheridan, as she hunts for her husband (Ross Elliott) who has disappeared after witnessing a murder. Dennis O'Keefe, cast as a reporter interested in interviewing the missing man, aids in the search. Bungled scripwriting kills off much of the suspense and inadequate acting serves to cool off any remaining commendation the picture might have drawn.

The Cariboo Trail (Fri.-Sat.) is the trek taken by Randolph Scott and Gabby Hayes, as they drive a herd of cattle across the U.S.-Canadian border into British Columbia. Set in the 1880's, the film spins a yarn of cattle rustling and gold prospecting that is dotted with fights and occasional romance. An average western that will cheer the school set on its holiday week.
